

Supreme Court, Appellate Division

Third Judicial Department

Decided and Entered: May 17, 2012

512789

In the Matter of the Claim of
SANDRA SOUTHARD,
Respondent,

v

CORNING HOTEL CORPORATION
et al.,
Appellants,
and

AFFIRMED Board's ruling that claimant's non-work related injuries were not sufficient to qualify the carrier to get reimbursement for the Special Fund per WCL §15(8)(d)

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

SPECIAL DISABILITY FUND,
Respondent.

WORKERS' COMPENSATION BOARD,
Respondent.

Calendar Date: April 20, 2012

Before: Spain, J.P., Kavanagh, Stein, McCarthy and Egan Jr., JJ.

Coughlin & Gerhart, L.L.P., Binghamton (Jeffrey A. Brown of counsel), for appellants.

Steven M. Licht, Special Funds Conservation Committee, Albany (Jill B. Singer of counsel), for Special Disability Fund, respondent.

Kavanagh, J.

Appeal from a decision of the Workers' Compensation Board, filed October 6, 2010, which discharged the Special Disability Fund from liability under Workers' Compensation Law § 15 (8) (d).

In April 2004, claimant suffered a work-related injury to her back and left hip and was awarded workers' compensation benefits.<sup>1</sup> The employer and its workers' compensation carrier (hereinafter collectively referred to as the employer) sought reimbursement from the Special Disability Fund pursuant to Workers' Compensation Law § 15 (8) (d), asserting that claimant's preexisting arteriovenous malformation had contributed to her disability. The Workers' Compensation Board ultimately determined that Workers' Compensation Law § 15 (8) (d) did not apply and the employer now appeals.

We affirm. To obtain reimbursement from the Fund, an employer must establish "that the claimant had a preexisting permanent impairment that hindered job potential, a subsequent injury arising out of and in the course of employment, and a permanent disability caused by both conditions materially and substantially greater than what would have been caused by the work-related injury alone" (Matter of Sturtevant v Broome County, 188 AD2d 893, 893-894 [1992]; accord Matter of Burley v Theriault Transp., 85 AD3d 1423, 1424 [2011]; Matter of Brown v Guilderland Cent. School Dist., 82 AD3d 1523, 1523 [2011]). Here, the Board concluded that the employer had not met the third prong of this test. The employer's medical expert opined that claimant suffers from a permanent marked partial disability of the lumbar spine. The record reflects that claimant also suffered from arteriovenous malformation and underwent brain surgery in 1999. While the surgery alleviated many of her symptoms, claimant still suffers from migraine headaches that cause her to call in sick to work on occasion. The medical expert concluded that this preexisting condition and the lumbar spine injury constituted a permanent disability that was materially and substantially greater than that caused solely by the lumbar spine injury.

We note, however, that "[t]he mere fact that the sum of the disabilities is materially greater than the subsequent disability alone is not sufficient to hold the . . . Fund liable" but, instead, the preexisting impairment "must increase the compensation liability above that which the employer would have incurred as a result of the subsequent injury alone" (Matter of Saletta v Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., 62 AD2d 360, 362 [1978], lv denied 45 NY2d 711 [1978]; see Matter of Eimers v Lee's Restaurant, 162 AD2d 850, 852 [1990]). In fact, the employer's expert stated that claimant's headaches, which she has suffered from throughout her life, did not increase her overall disability (see Matter of Saletta v Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., 62 AD2d at 362). Claimant herself testified that the headaches caused her to call in sick or leave work early at times, but that she did not have to change her job duties. Inasmuch as there is no evidence in the record that claimant's preexisting condition resulted in a disability materially and substantially greater than that caused by the April 2004 lumbar spine injury, we conclude that the Board properly discharged the Fund from liability.

---

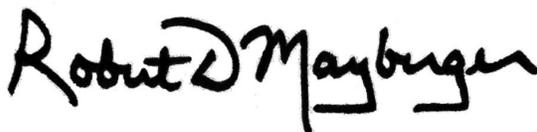

<sup>1</sup> Claimant also suffered a work-related injury in August 2004. That claim is not a subject of this appeal.

Spain, J.P., Stein, McCarthy and Egan Jr., JJ., concur.

ORDERED that the decision is affirmed, without costs.

ENTER:

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Robert D. Mayberger". The signature is written in a cursive, slightly slanted style.

Robert D. Mayberger
Clerk of the Court